ALEX CLARK

In 2019, Alex Clark dreamed up the first ever pop culture daily show from a conservative perspective, POPolitics! From the hottest entertainment news to breaking stories in politics, she reported daily, “without the propaganda.” Alex’s impact on young, conservative women through POPolitics led her to create the “Cuteservative movement.”

Her unapologetic approach to culture is defined daily by her wit and right-of-center lens. Then in 2021, The Spillover (the big sister to POPolitics), came onto the scene. The Spillover is a daring deep dive into the stories that Alex is compelled by beyond the Hollywood news cycle. With over 2 million downloads to date, every week she leaves her audience on the edge of their seat with stories that challenge, haunt, humor, and captivate. From the dangers of seed oils to hostage situations, and exorcisms to homesteading – each episode leans into the importance of story.

Today, Alex’s passions and dynamic storytelling have culminated into Real Alex Clark. Each week, she releases entertaining YouTube Shorts, is joined by fellow Turning Point USA Contributors on panels, and creates compelling video essays that are reaching an audience beyond the conservative movement. Whether she’s giving her take on POPolitics LIVE, The Spillover, Fox News, Fox Business, Newsmax, or even on her personal Instagram page – Alex’s unique approach to conservative ideas challenges the status quo of politics and pop culture.

Riley Gaines is a trailblazing athlete and advocate, making waves for Gen Z with her passion for fairness in women’s sports. As a 12-time All-American swimmer at the University of Kentucky, she has shown what dedication and hard work can achieve both in and out of the pool. Riley’s bold stance on ensuring equal competition and protecting the integrity of women’s athletics has made her a powerful voice in today’s culture. As a Contributor for Turning Point USA, she brings not only her athletic achievements but also her fierce commitment to standing up for what’s right. Her personal experience and leadership align with TPUSA’s mission to promote free speech and conservative values, while inspiring the next generation to stay true to their beliefs and fight for what matters most.

RILEY GAINES

Born in North Korea, human rights activist and TED Talk Speaker Yeonmi Park grew up in a punishing society devoted to the worship of Kim Jong-Il. At the age of 13, she and her family made a daring escape to China in search of a life free of tyranny. In her viral talks, viewed online nearly 350 million times, Park urges audiences to recognize and resist the oppression that exists in North Korea, and around the world.

Growing up in Hyesan, North Korea, it was normal for Yeonmi Park to see dead bodies as she walked to school, and to be so hungry that she ate wild plants. After watching a pirated copy of Titanic, the veil of tyranny began to fall. Having caught a glimpse of a free world, Park realized that her experience of life wasn't the only one—and that she might one day find a way out. In 2002, Park's family suffered a crucial blow when her father was arrested and sent to a prison camp for engaging in "illegal trading"—selling materials that no one would be punished for in a free society. In 2007, Park's sister escaped with a friend before she and her mother followed her to China but before they could locate her, Park and her mother were sold separately to Chinese human traffickers. In 2009, Park and her mother crossed the Gobi desert to Mongolia from China in -40-degree weather, finding their freedom in South Korea. Yeonmi recounts this incredible story in her searing memoir, "In Order to Live: A North Korean Girl's Journey to Freedom," and in the insightful, moving talks based on her experiences.

An insightful and candid speaker, Park is fast becoming a leading voice of oppressed people around the world. At the Oslo Freedom Forum and the One Young World Summit in Dublin, she became an international phenomenon, delivering passionate and deeply personal speeches about the brutality of the North Korean regime. Her address to One Young World on the horrors of detention camps, political executions, and sex trafficking was viewed over 320 million times. The BBC named Park one of its "Top 100 Global Women."

CHRISSEY CLARK

Chrissy is a former TPUSA Chapter President, journalist, and content creator who prides herself on reporting the underreported stories that mainstream media ignores or under-represents. Chrissy got her start in conservative activism and journalism while studying at Michigan State University, where she was the president of her school’s TPUSA chapter for four years (2015-2019).

Despite being in a sea of left-wing ideology, her team networked with like-minded conservatives on campus and organized to spread the values of TPUSA. With big goals to propel the conservative movement forward, she started her own podcast and garnered a reputation for creating unique content. On her podcast, Underreported Stories, she provides the top five stories of the day with a unique and unfiltered perspective on America’s culture crisis. Chrissy can be credited with breaking news too, as she was the first to break the outrageous story about the left canceling several popular Dr. Seuss children’s books and the controversy that erupted thereafter.

Due to the success of Chrissy’s viral platforms, which have amassed over 460,000+ followers, she has used her reach to boldly fight the culture war! Based in Nashville, Tennessee, she has written for numerous media outlets including, The Daily Wire, Daily Caller, The Federalist, the Washington Free Beacon, and many more!

Before joining the TPUSA Contributor team, Jobob worked for almost a decade as a political consultant and communications director for various political campaigns around the country. In 2021, he decided to come out from behind the scenes of the political consulting world and landed a spot as the host of Daily Caller Live w/ Jobob on the Daily Caller platform. His deadpan and often sarcastic take on the news of the day is an attempt to bring some levity and humor to an otherwise dismal news cycle. As a TPUSA Contributor, his goal is to help bring a widely missing comedic element to the conservative movement in hopes that he can attract Americans who fall into his favorite cultural category; conservatives who just don’t know they’re conservatives yet!
